

DOUGHERTY AGAIN PLACED ON TRIAL

Ex-Superintendent of Peoria Schools Faces 26 Year Old Forgery Charge.

EIGHT OF JURORS CHOSEN

Accused Former Convict as Confident of Winning as State Is of Convicting Him.

Peoria, Ill., March 31.—Newton C. Dougherty, ex-convict and former banker and ex-superintendent of the Peoria schools, was placed on trial yesterday on a charge of forgery, the specific crime being the fraudulent use of a school teacher's name on school scrip issued by him in October, 1888.

The instance is one of scores growing out of the alleged half million dollar embezzlement of Dougherty covering a period of nearly twenty years, discovery of which several years ago resulted in the closing of the Peoria National bank, and the disruption of the school system, and later the conviction of Dougherty and his confinement in the state penitentiary at Joliet.

He served five years and was pardoned, but proceedings again to convict him were at once started and resulted after much legal skirmishing in the calling of his trial yesterday.

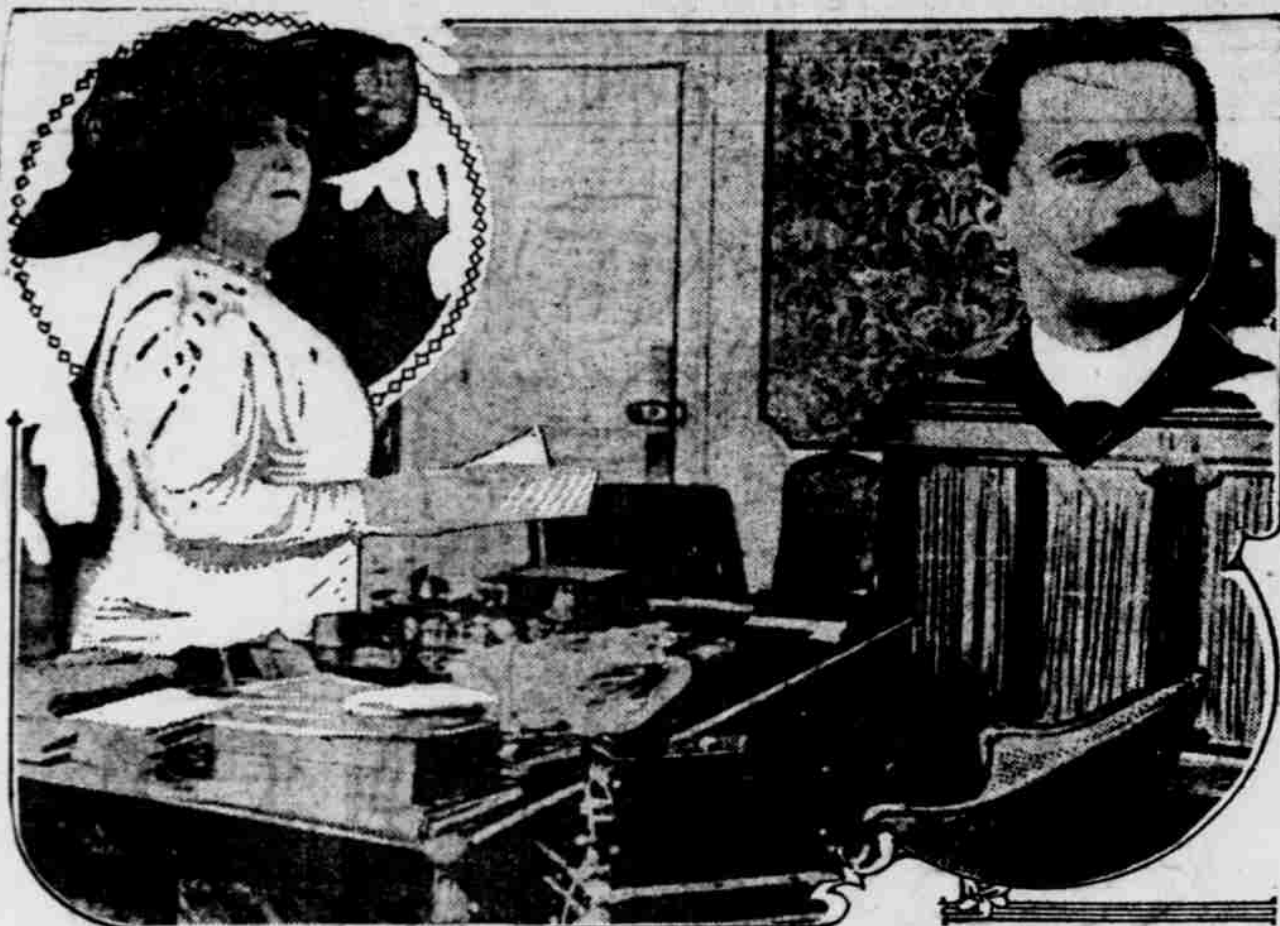

Eight jurors were selected for the trial yesterday, they having been picked from a venire of over fifty men who were passed on by attorneys. It is expected that the four other jurors will be picked today.

Dougherty was in court with his counsel and appeared confident he would prove his innocence of the charge against him.

Over 100 Counts in Indictment. There is over a hundred counts in the indictment on which he is being tried, and the state believes it can prove one or more of them.

The defendant held under bond of $15,000 in Mason county on indictments for forgery, on which change of venue was taken from the Peoria courts, is held on a bond of $300 from the Peoria courts. This low bond is claimed to have resulted from an error in figures approved by the court, which should have read $13,000.

Witnesses Tell of Mme. Caillaux's Fear of Editor

Mme. Caillaux in court, Gaston Calmette and room where she shot him.

Paris, March 31.—Mme. Caillaux, slayer of Gaston Calmette, the Figaro editor, is more than pleased with the disclosures made in her examination before Magistrate Boucard. She believes the evidence all tended to show that the murder of Calmette was justified.

It was brought out that the editor offered large sums of money to various ladies, including Princess Menagoue Esaradere, to arrange an interview for the Figaro with Mme. Dupre, the divorced wife of M. Caillaux. It is Mme. Caillaux's contention that Calmette wished to get letters from Mme. Dupre which Caillaux wrote to his present wife before their marriage.

In January of this year, in the presence of Princess Estradere, Calmette offered $6,000 to a certain woman, a mutual friend of M. Calmette and Mme. Dupre, who was denoted in the testimony as Mme. X, to arrange an interview with Mme. Dupre for the Figaro. Mme. X refused the offer.

Mme. Caillaux on the stand testified that she was certain Calmette intended to publish two letters written by Caillaux to her before their marriage.

Isadore de Lara, the English composer, who is one of the members of the Princess of Monaco's set, testified that although he was an intimate friend of the dead editor, he felt it was his duty to come forward and tell the whole truth, which was altogether favorable to Mme. Caillaux. He said Calmette's activity against the Caillauxs and his determination to ruin them was relentless.

An interesting commentary on the Caillaux murder case has been made by the former wife of a French journalist, a woman who is acquainted with the figures in this city's latest tragedy. Speaking of Mme. Caillaux, she says:

"However great her wrongs may be, she is to be pitied. She wanted to give Calmette a lesson—would him slightly. For that purpose she got an automatic revolver, which she did not know how to handle. When she intended to fire one shot the others followed automatically and killed the man. She wanted to save her husband from further attacks—possibly prove to him and the world that she loved him—and with true feminine logic she adopted straightway the one means that in no case could have helped him, and, under the circumstances, put an instantaneous end to the politician's career and ambition.

"She wanted to satisfy her own honor by punishing the man who had dared to publish a compromising letter written by her present husband and addressed to her while she was still her former husband's wife. But her name had not been mentioned. It was not even said, in plain words, that the message was addressed to a woman. By taking the law in her own hands she publicly admitted what was only being murmured, and which it was easier to ignore than the printed denunciations in the columns of the Figaro.

"Mme. Caillaux has failed in her plan from whatever side one may look at it. She must now be held on the charge of murder, and the brilliant future that both she and her husband were aiming at is irreparably removed out of their reach.

"For Mme. Caillaux is not only a handsome woman; she is, above all, ambitious. And every one of her steps in life having taken her upward on the worldly ladder, her ambition increased proportionately, until the tragic day brought her to the most ignominious of French prisoners, Saint Lazare, to which the police nightly cart all sorts of evil women."

DAY IN DAVENPORT

Has Fund for Distribution.—W. C. Brown, treasurer of state, now has on hand in the automobile fund $537,609 for the distribution among the counties of the state on April 1. Of this amount 15 per cent, or $80,559 will be withheld, a part of which will go to pay the expense of the highway commission and the remainder for the support of the motor vehicle department. The total amount to be distributed among the counties will be $456,450. There are 1,643 townships in the state, and each county will receive a per cent of the total sum according to the number of townships it contains. The state on April 1 will distribute practically $100,000 more than it did last year. The amount divided among the counties in April, 1913, was $257,927.55. The distribution in August 1913, was $228,021.88. Of the total registration fees, 8 per cent is devoted to paying the costs of the highway commission and 7 per cent to the cost of collecting. The treasurer reports the insurance fund has almost reached the $500,000 mark as was predicted. The total receipts from the fire and life insurance companies this year have been $448,878.84, compared with $390,534.96 paid in 1913.

ILLINOIS MINERS ARE NOT TO QUIT

Will Remain at Their Work Until New Wage Scale Is Fixed, It Is Announced.

OPERATORS WANT STRIKE

President John P. White So Charges and Urges Men to Avoid Endangering Their Union.

Peoria, Ill., March 31.—The Illinois miners will remain at work until a new scale of wages is fixed or until the referendum vote of the union accepts or rejects the plan outlined by the policy committee of the national organization.

This was decided at the meeting of the Illinois district, United Mine Workers of America, yesterday afternoon, following an address by John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America. A resolution to have the miners of the state stop work until a new contract was negotiated was introduced by David Wilson of O'Fallon, Ill. The present contract, known as the "Cleveland contract," expires April 1.

President Pope overruled the resolution on the ground that the national convention had ruled that the central competitive field should continue in operation until an agreement had been reached.

No Fight Over Resolution.

A howl of protest greeted an appeal by a delegate from the ruling of the chair and after a temporary chairman had been appointed the resolution was railroaded out of the convention before Wilson had a chance to support it or President Pope was allowed to talk on his ruling.

John P. White, in his address, pleaded for an endorsement from Illinois of the national policy with reference to remaining at work until an agreement had been made. He said a general strike in eastern states would mean an unconditional surrender of the strikers in Colorado and Vancouver, and cited the outcome of these strikes as an index to future successes of the union in unorganized fields. He looked upon organization of nonunion fields as the primary work of the union at the present time.

Leader Accuses Operators.

The national president accused the operators of pulling all their wires in an endeavor to effect a strike so that the national organization might not be able to meet the demands now placed upon it by the several strikes in the United States.

He said that a general strike now would break the backbone of the union, and that it might as well try to expand its influence if such a strike was called in the face of present disagreements.

In the cellar. The patrol wagon was called and the intruder, Jess Van Arsdale was taken to the police station. Van Arsdale is charged with vagrancy. He was sent to jail for 10 days. "I was sleepy, I guess, and didn't know where to go," declared the prisoner. It was apparent that the man had no intention of burglarizing the house. Rest is what he sought, judging from his condition when discovered by Detective Kinney.

Federation Scholarship Fund.—The chairman of the scholarship and loan fund committee of the Iowa Federation of Women's clubs, reports that up to Feb. 25, 1914, the total contributions of the club and individuals to the fund amounted to $5,549.48. This is about one-half of the amount the committee members desire. There are about 15,000 club women in the federation and when these women have contributed $10,000, or about 75 cents per capita, the committee will feel that it has all the money it will wish to handle.
